Westside Group of Companies will promote our environmental policy through close association with industry bodies, building designers and constructors actively seeking a cultural change in our industries approach to building design and delivery method by encouraging innovation and creativity.

The Company is committed to establish environmental objectives at relevant functions, levels and processes needed for the environmental management system. All environmental objectives shall be appropriate, measurable and will be continuously reviewed and updated to ensure environmental compliances.

The environmental aspect of our Business Management System is designed to ensure that we will commit to:

- the protection of the environment, including prevention of pollutions and other specific environmental aspects relevant to the Company;
- Make better use of environmentally sustainable design knowledge and technology in the life cycle of a building by expanding networks and promoting project delivery methods that encourage more effective dissemination of knowledge and in turn promote better integration of design, construction and operation;
- Promote 'green' building practices and environmental awareness within the construction industry through a communication campaign highlighting gains to building occupants from good indoor environment quality providing better staff productivity, general sense of wellbeing and the benefits of lower life cycle costs;
- Make a commitment to the reduction and elimination of the use of Volatile Organic Compounds (VOC's) and Ozone Depleting Substances (ODS's) being incorporated into or building projects and encourage the same of our specialist contractors and supplier; and
- Fulfil all applicable statutory and regulatory requirements.

The Business Management System that the Company has established is based on compliance with the standard ISO14001:2016. The methods employed are to be kept under continual review and improved whenever and wherever possible.

These principles are basic to the Company and all employees are expected to embrace and support them as a team and to actively pursue the requirements of the Business Management System so that we can meet our environmental obligations.
